That depends upon the Liver. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

THE TOUCHES OF HER HANDS.

The touches of her hands are like the fall
Of velvet snowflakes; like the touch of down
The peach just brushes 'gainst the garden wall;
The flossy fondlings of the thistle wisp
Caught in the crinkle of a leaf of brown
The blighting frost hath turned from green to crisp.

Soft as the falling of the dusk at night,
The touches of her hands and the delight—
The touches of her hands!
The touches of her hands are like the dew
That falls so softly down no one e'er knew
The touch thereof save lovers like to one
Astray in lights where ranged Endymion.

Oh, rarely soft, the touches of her hands,
As drowsy zephyrs in enchanted lands,
Or pulse of dying fay, or fairy sighs;
Or—in between the midnight and the dawn,
When long unrest and tears and fears are gone—
Sleep, smoothing down the lids of weary eyes.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

THE BRIGAND.

Misadventures? Well, if I were an author by profession I could make a pretty big book of the administrative mishaps which befell me during the three years I spent in Corsica as legal adviser to the French prefecture. Here is one which will probably amuse you:

I had just entered upon my duties at Ajaccio. One morning I was at the club, reading the papers which had just arrived from Paris, when the prefect's manservant brought me a note, hastily written in pencil: "Come at once; I want you. We have got the brigand Quastana." I uttered an exclamation of joy and went off as fast as I could to the prefecture. I must tell you that, under the empire, the arrest of a Corsican bandit was looked upon as a brilliant exploit and meant promotion, especially if you threw a certain dash of romance about it in your official report.

Unfortunately brigands had become scarce. The people were getting more civilized, and the vendetta was dying out. If by chance a man did kill another in a row, or do something which made it advisible for him to keep clear of the police, he generally bolted to Sardinia instead of turning brigand. This was not to our liking, for no brigand, no promotion. However, our prefect had succeeded in finding one. He was an old rascal, Quastana by name, who to avenge the murder of his brother had killed goodness knows how many people. He had been pursued with vigor, but had escaped, and after a time the hue and cry had subsided, and he had been forgotten.

Fifteen years had passed, and the man had lived in seclusion, but our prefect, having heard of the affair and obtained a clew to his whereabouts, endeavored to capture him with no more success than his predecessor. We were beginning to despair of our promotion. You can therefore imagine how pleased I was to receive the note from my chief.

I found him in his study talking very confidently to a man of the true Corsican peasant type.

"This is Quastana's cousin," said the prefect to me in a low tone. "He lives in the little village of Solenzara, just above Porto Vecchio, and the brigand pays him a visit every Sunday evening to have a game of scopa. Now, it seems that these two had some words the other Sunday, and this fellow has determined to have revenge. So he proposes to hand his cousin over to justice, and between you and me I believe he means it. But as I want to make the capture myself and in as brilliant a manner as possible it is advisable to take precautions in order not to expose the government to ridicule. That's what I want you for. You are quite a stranger in the country, and nobody knows you. I want you to go and see for certain if it really is Quastana who goes to this man's house."

"But I have never seen Quastana," I began.

My chief pulled out his pocketbook and drew forth a photograph much the worse for wear.

"Here you are!" he exclaimed. "The rascal had the cheek to have his photograph taken last year at Porto Vecchio!"

While we were looking at the photo the peasant drew near, and I saw his eyes flash vengefully, but the look quickly vanished, and his face assumed its usual stolid appearance.

"Are you not afraid that the presence of a stranger will frighten your cousin away on the following Sunday?" we asked.

"No," replied the man. "He is too fond of cards; besides, there are many new faces about here now on account of the shooting. I'll say that this gentleman has come for me to show him where the game is to be found."

Thereupon we made an appointment for the next Sunday, and the fellow walked off without the least compunction for his dirty trick. When he was gone, the prefect impressed upon me the necessity for keeping the matter very quiet, because he intended that nobody else should share the credit of the capture. I assured him that I would not breathe a word, thanked him for his kindness in asking me to assist him, and we separated to go to our work and dream of promotion.

The next morning I set out in full shooting costume and took the coach which does the journey from Ajaccio to Bastia. For those who love nature there is no better ride in the world, but I was too busy with my castles in the air to notice any of the beauties of the landscape.

At Bonifacio we stopped for dinner. When I got in the coach again, just a little elevated by the contents of a good sized bottle, I found that I had a fresh traveling companion, who had taken a seat next to me. He was an official at Bastia, and I had already met him, a man about my own age and a native of Paris like myself, a decent sort of fellow.

You are probably aware that the administration as represented by the prefect, etc., and the magistrature never got on well together; in Corsica it is worse than elsewhere. The seat of the administration is at Ajaccio, that of the magistrature at Bastia. We two therefore belonged to hostile parties. But when you are a long way from home and meet some one from your native place you forget all else and talk of the old country.

We were fast friends in less than no time, and we were consoling each other for being in exile, as he termed it. The bottle of wine had loosened my tongue, and I soon told him in strict confidence that I was looking forward to going back to France to take up some good post as a reward for my share in the capture of Quastana, whom we hoped to arrest at his cousin's house one Sunday evening. When my companion got off the coach at Porto Vecchio, we felt as though we had known each other for years.

* * * * * * *

I arrived at Solenzara between 4 and 5 o'clock. The place is populated in winter by workmen, fishermen and customs officials, but in summer every one who can shifts his quarters up in the mountains on account of fever. The village was therefore nearly deserted when I reached it that Sunday afternoon.

I entered a small inn and had something to eat while waiting for Matteo. Time went on, and the fellow did not put in an appearance. The innkeeper began to look at me suspiciously and I felt rather uncomfortable. At last there came a knock, and Matteo entered.

"He has come to my house," he said, raising his hand to his hat. "Will you follow me there?"

We went outside. It was very dark and windy. We stumbled along a stony path for about three miles—a narrow path—full of small stones and overgrown and luxuriant vegetation, which prevented us from going quickly.

"That's my house," said Matteo, pointing among the bushes to a light which was flickering at a short distance from us.

A minute later we were confronted by a big dog, who barked furiously at us. One would have imagined that he meant to stop us going farther along the road.

"Here, Bruccio, Bruccio!" cried my guide. Then leaning toward me he said: "That's Quastana's dog. A ferocious animal. He has no equal for keeping watch." Turning to the dog he again called out: "That's all right, old fellow. Do you take us for policemen?"

The enormous animal quieted down and came and sniffed around our legs. It was a splendid Newfoundland dog, with a thick, white, woolly coat, which had obtained for him the name of Bruccio (white cheese). He ran in front of us to the house, a kind of stone hut, with a large hole in the roof, which did duty for both chimney and window.

In the center of the room stood a rough table, around which were several seats made of portions of trunks of trees, hacked into shape with a chopper. A torch stuck in a piece of wood gave a flickering light, around which flew a swarm of moths and other insects.

At the table sat a man who looked like an Italian or Provencal fisherman, with a shrewd, sunburned, clean shaven face. He was leaning over a pack of cards and was enveloped in a cloud of tobacco smoke.

"Cousin Quastana," said Matteo as we went in, "this is a gentleman who is going shooting with me in the morning. He will sleep here tonight, so as to be close to the spot in good time tomorrow."

When you have been an outlaw and had to fly for your life, you look with suspicion upon a stranger. Quastana looked me straight in the eyes for a second; then, apparently satisfied, he saluted me and took no further notice of me. Two minutes later the cousins were absorbed in a game of scopa.

It is astonishing what a mania for card playing existed in Corsica at that time, and it is probably the same now. The clubs and cafes were watched by the police, for the young men ruined themselves at a game called bouillote. In the villages it was the same; the peasants were mad for a game at cards, and when they had no money they played for their pipes, knives, sheep—anything.

I watched the two men with great interest as they sat opposite each other, silently playing the game. They watched each other's movements, the cards either face downward upon the table or carefully held so that the opponent might not catch a glimpse of them, and gave an occasional quick glance at their hand without losing sight of the other player's face. I was especially interested in watching Quastana. The photograph was a very good one, but it could not reproduce the sunburned face, the vivacity and agility of movement, surprising in a man of his age, and the hoarse, hollow voice peculiar to those who spend most of their time in solitude.

Between two and three hours passed in this way, and I had some difficulty in keeping awake in the stuffy air of the hut and the long stretches of silence broken only by an occasional exclamation: "Seventeen!" "Eighteen!" From time to time I was aroused by a heavy gust of wind or a dispute between the players.

Suddenly there was a savage bark from Bruccio, like a cry of alarm. We all sprang up, and Quastana rushed out of the door, returning an instant later and seizing his gun. With an exclamation of rage he darted out of the door again and was gone.

Matteo and I were looking at one another in surprise, when a dozen armed men entered and called upon us to surrender. And in less time than it takes to tell you we were on the ground, bound and prisoners. In vain I tried to make the gendarmes understand who I was. They would not listen to me. "That's all right. You will have an opportunity of making an explanation when we get to Bastia."

They dragged us to our feet and drove us out with the butt ends of their carbines. Handcuffed and pushed about by one and another, we reached the bottom of the slope, where a prison van was waiting for us—a vile box without ventilation and full of vermin—into which we were thrown and driven to Bastia, escorted by gendarmes with drawn swords.

A nice position for a government official!

* * * * * * *

It was broad daylight when we reached Bastia. The public prosecutor, the colonel of the gendarmes and the governor of the prison were impatiently awaiting us. I never saw a man look more astonished than the corporal in charge of the escort as, with a triumphant smile, he led me to these gentlemen and saw them hurry toward me with all sorts of apologies and take off the handcuffs.

"What! Is it you?" exclaimed the public prosecutor. "Have these idiots really arrested you! But how did it come about—what is the meaning of it?"

Explanations followed. On the previous day the public prosecutor had received a telegram from Porto Vecchio, informing him of the presence of Quastana in the locality, and giving precise details as to where and when he could be found. The name of Porto Vecchio opened my eyes; it was that traveling companion of mine who had played me this shabby trick. He was the prosecutor's deputy.

"But, my dear sir," said the public prosecutor, "who ever would have expected to see you in shooting costume in the house of a brigand's cousin? We have given you rather a bad time of it, but I know you will not bear malice, and you will prove it by coming to breakfast with me." Then turning to the corporal and pointing to Matteo he said: "Take this fellow away. We will deal with him in the morning."

The unfortunate Matteo remained dumb with fright. He looked appealingly at me, and I of course could not do otherwise than explain matters. Taking the prosecutor on one side, I told him that Matteo was really assisting the prefect to capture the brigand, but as I told him all about the matter his face assumed a hard, judicial expression.

"I am sorry for the prefecture," he said, "but I have Quastana's cousin and I won't let him go! He will be tried with some peasants, who are accused of having supplied the brigand with provisions."

"But I repeat that this man is really in the service of the prefecture," I protested.

"So much the worse for the prefecture," said he, with a laugh. "I am going to give the administration a lesson it won't forget and teach it not to meddle with what doesn't concern it. There is only one brigand in Corsica, and you want to take him! He's my game, I tell you. The prefect knows that, yet he tries to forestall me! Now I will pay him out. Matteo shall be tried. He will of course appeal to your side. There will be a great to do, and the brigand will be put on his guard against his cousin and gentlemen of the prefecture who go shooting."

Well, he kept his word. We had to appear on behalf of Matteo, and we had a nice time of it in court. I was the laughing stock of the place. Matteo was acquitted, but he could no longer be of use to us, because Quastana was forewarned. He had to quit the country.

As to Quastana, he was never caught. He knew the country, and every peasant was secretly ready to assist him, and although the soldiers and gendarmes tried their best to take him they could not manage it. When I left the island, he was still at liberty, and I never heard anything about him since.—From the French of Alphonse Daudet.

State Convention of Fruit-Growers.

A convention of fruit-growers and others interested in fruit culture in California is hereby called, at the request of members of Congress from this State, to meet at Pioneer Hall, Fourth street near Market, San Francisco, at 10 o'clock, A. M., Thursday, July 13th, 1893.

The purpose of this convention is to gather and present such facts respecting fruit culture in the State as shall inform the judgment of our Representatives in Congress in respect to the necessity of a revision of tariff duties upon imported fruit.

Fruit and raisin growers and others are requested to attend this meeting and to bring, in tabulated form, facts and figures showing the present value of the land in their respective localities, before and after planting, and cost of caring for the same for five successive years. All expenditures of whatever kind should be included in the estimate, which should also show the income derived, amount of different fruits produced per acre, prices realized, cost of labor, freight, etc. The information is desired for comparison with the cost of land, production, labor, freight, etc, paid by European growers.

This subject is deemed of the utmost importance to the fruit industry in general, and those interested should take an active part in this matter and attend the convention.

COUNTY ITEMS.

A fire at Healdsburg Tuesday caused the destruction of Pruett's livery stable, three cottages belonging to Mrs. Walker and two cottages of the L. A. Norton estate The loss was estimated at $6,000; small insurance.

The case of the People vs. Mary R. J. Fix, charged with attempting to kill little Carrie Sterling in 1889, came on for trial in Department 1 of the Superior Court Tuesday. District Attorney Seawell moved for dismissel on the ground that the defendant had already been punished by a heavy fine, and also that there was insufficient evidence to secure a conviction. The case was dismissed.

Shortly after 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Mary, the wife of Col. H. W. Byington, Internal Revenue Collector at Sacramento, died at the family residence in this city. Her life was despaired of for several days past, and the end was expected at any time. Death was the result of a general breaking down of the system, superinduced by a hopeless affection of the kidneys. When the final hour came her husband and children were beside her. The deceased was a native of Great Britain, and her early years were spent in Liverpool, England. She was married to H. W. Byington, in San Francisco in 1853. Four children were the result of the union, two of whom survive her, Walter H. and Miss Josephine Byington. In 1875 she came to reside with her husband in Santa Rosa, and since that time, with the exception of short intervals, she has made her home here. She was a woman of strongly marked character loyal in her friendships, devoted to her family and generous in her benefactions.—Santa Rosa Democrat.

When one has a bad cold and the nose is closed up so that you can not breathe through it, relief may be found instantly by putting a little camphor and water in the center of the hand and snuffing it up the nose. This is a great relief.

A man who can give up dreaming and go to his daily realities, who can smother down his heart, its love or woe, and take to the hard work of his hand, who defies fate, and, if he must die, dies fighting to the last—that man is life's best hero.

No school is more necessary to children than patience, because either the will must be broken in childhood or the heart in old age.

How is This?

Something unique even in these days of mammoth premium offers, it is the latest effort of Stafford's Magazine, a New York monthly of home and general reading.

The proposition is to send the Magazine one year for one dollar, the regular subscription price; and in addition to send each subscriber fifty-two complete novels during the twelve months: one each week.

Think of it. You receive a new and complete novel, by mail, post paid, every week for fifty-two weeks, and in addition you get the magazine once a month, for twelve months, all for one dollar. It is an offer which the publishers can only afford to make in the confident expectations of getting a hundred thousand new subscribers. Among the authors in the coming series are, Wilkie Collins, Walter Besant, Mrs. Oliphant, Mary Cecil Hay, Florence Marryat, Anthony Trollope, A. Conan Doyle, Miss Braddon, Captain Marryat, Miss Thackery and Jules Verne. If you wish to take advantage of this unusual opportunity, send one dollar for Stafford's Magazine, one year. Your first copy of the magazine and your first number of the fifty-two novels (one each week) which you are to receive during the year will be sent you by return mail. Remit by P. O. ## Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HEART DISEASE 30 YEARS.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 8th, 1892.

GENTLEMEN: I had been troubled with HEART DISEASE FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS, and although I was treated by able physicians and tried many remedies, I grew steadily worse until I was COMPLETELY PROSTRATED AND CONFINED TO MY BED WITHOUT ANY HOPE OF RECOVERY. I would have very bad sinking spells, when my pulse would stop beating altogether, and it was with the greatest difficulty that my circulation could be started, which would bring me back to consciousness again. While in this condition I tried your NEW HEART CURE, and began to improve from the first, and now I am able to do a good day's work for a man 68 years of age. I give DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE all the credit for my recovery. It is over six months since I have taken any, although I keep a bottle in the house in case I should need it. I have also used your NERVE AND LIVER PILLS, and think a great deal of them. Z. AVERY.

Alma, the little three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dalpogetto, was severely bitten by a savage dog last Saturday evening. The brute, without a warning growl, jumped on the child, while she was playing in front of her father's place of business, and sunk his teeth deep into the flesh of the left cheek, near the eye, causing the blood to flow copiously. The little one lost a large quantity of blood before the flow could be stanched. The owner of the dog is unknown. The father very sensibly took a double-barreled shot gun and killed the savage brute.

A petition will be presented to the Board of Supervisors next Monday by our local sportsmen requesting that the Board suspend the State law, which it has the power to do, and make the open season for deer shooting from the 15th of July to the 15th of August. As the law now reads the open season commences on September 1st and closes on October 15th. It is a well-known fact that deer meat during the months of September and October is unfit for food. It is also claimed that during the same period the animals are so tame that they will be wontonly slaughtered. A deer law for Sierra county will not answer for Sonoma or vice versa.

"BLOOD ON THE MOON."

A Sunday Row at Agua Caliente.

There was "blood on the moon" at Agua Caliente last Sunday with the result that there was a free fight in which were several participants, two of whom have been placed under arrest. It appears that J. B. Morris and his son Ralph Morris became involved in a wordy dispute with John Austin, Wells, Fargo and Co's. agent in that interesting town, over the payment of thirty-five cents expressage due the agent from Morris, which ended in a knock-down and drag-out fight with Morris on one side and Austin on the other. After a scrimmage lasting several minutes, in which the parties were more or less battered up, Austin retired. After he had sought refuge in his bed-room, Austin claims that the elder Morris stormed his castle and attempted to capture him, the while exclaiming "Let me get at him!" "Let me get at him!" his intention, no doubt, being to "chaw him up and spit him out." Thereupon the besieged man grabbed up a shot gun to defend himself. This was too much for Morris and the doughty warrior took to flight.

On Monday warrants were sworn out and both parties were placed under arrest by officer Sparks. Morris is charged with battery and Austin with battery and assault with a deadly weapon. The matter will be ventilated in Judge Cheney's Court next Friday, and the trial promises to be a racy one.

THE BAND CONCERT.

A Successful Entertainment—The Members.

The concert given by the Sonoma Valley Band at Weyl's Hall, on Friday evening of last week, was attended by a large and fashionable audience of the music-loving people of Sonoma and vicinity. The large hall was crowded almost to suffocation, about two-thirds of those present being ladies. The programme, which was carried out under the direction of Mr. H G. Maxwell, reflected great credit on that gentleman, who is a natural born musician and leader. The members of the band, seventeen in number, without an exception, showed themselves to be excellent musicians and all acquitted themselves admirably and in doing so sustained the well-earned reputation of the Sonoma Valley Band as being the best in the State outside of San Francisco. The 'cello solo by Mr. Herman Brandt, the singing of Mrs. Weems and the cornet solo by Miss May Cook were heartily encored, particularly the latter, who completely captivated the audience.

At the conclusion of the programme, which consisted of twelve numbers, dancing was indulged in until 2 o'clock in the morning. This ended one of the most successful and enjoyable musical entertainments ever held in Sonoma, and one, too, which has never been surpassed in the interior of the State.

Following are the members of the band: Frank A. Riser, piccolo; H. G. Maxwell, flat clarinet; Jesse Burris, solo B flat clarinet; Carrol Prunty, 1st B flat clarinet; John Burke, 2nd B flat clarinet; William Hintze, alto saxophone; F. L. Clark, tenor saxophone; Robt. Wilson, solo cornet; Claude Johnson, 1st cornet; Henry Seipp, 1st alto; Adolf Hansen, 2nd alto; William Wyatt, 1st slide trombone; Harry Faithful, 2nd slide trombone; Frank Carmer, euphonium; E. Dowdall, tuba; Chas. Cutter snare drum; Jas. Albertson, bass drum.

Malone vs. Monahan.

The controversy between Patrick Monahan and Mrs. Susan Malone over a road leading from the Monahan place through the Malone ranch, a few miles west of this place, has at last been settled. The case has been before the Superior Court for a long time. By the terms of the settlement Mr. Monahan pays Mrs. Malone $500 for the disputed road.

Savings and Loan Society vs. Luttrell.

Judgment has been rendered by Judge Crawford in favor of the Savings and Loan Society of San Francisco and against Mrs. S. J. Luttrell for $11,403.60, amount due on a promissory note secured by mortgage.

The use of English ivy cannot be too strongly recommended as a decoration in our rooms during the winter season. A lady noted for the beauty and freshness of her vines was asked the secret of her success, which was simply putting a small piece beefsteak at the roots of the plants every spring and fall.

Simmons Liver Regulator is a medicine endorsed and used by physicians and druggists.

THE MAN WITH A BULLET IN HIS BRAIN.

He Dies After Surviving His Injury Over Four Months.

Alfred Du Bois, the young Frenchman who accidentally shot himself through the brain in Glen Ellen, near this place, on the 14th of February last, died at the County Hospital last Saturday evening, just four months and ten days after the accident.

This case is one of the most extraordinary that has occurred in surgical annals in this State. The ball from the pistol penetrated the forehead over the right eye and entered the brain. Dr. Vance of this place together with Dr. Smith of Santa Rosa were called in to take charge of the case, and after an examination of the patient, and discovering that the bullet had penetrated the brain, were somewhat surprised to see, as the days rolled on, that their patient, instead of dying, was inclined to recover. In two or three weeks after receiving the wound Du Bois was up and around apparently none the worse for his injury, if we except pains behind the left ear and upon the top of his cranium. Two months after the accident he took a backset and was removed to the County Hospital at Santa Rosa, where at times his condition was so favorable it was thought he would recover. A change for the worse, however, was noticed last week, and after surviving a wound for months that ought to have been instantly fatal from a surgeon's standpoint, he succumbed to the inevitable last Saturday as narrated above.

An autopsy was conducted at the County Hospital the next day after Du Bois' death by Dr. Press Smith, County Physician, and Dr. Vance of this place. The bullet was found embedded in the right frontal or anterior lobe of the brain proper to the extent of half an inch, in a part of the brain understood to be concerned only with the intellectual functions. The bullet had not traveled more than an inch from its place of entrance, taking an oblique course. That part of the skull through which the bullet entered the brain was very thick. This accounts for the flattened condition of the bullet and for its lessened velocity. Had the skull been of ordinary thickness the bullet would undoubtedly have passed clean through the head as the pistol was one of large calibre. The brain was discovered to be healthy and presented a normal appearance in the immediate neighborhood of where the bullet was found. The victim might have lived on had not the lining membrane of the brain at the site of injury became inflamed. It was this irritation of the brain membrane that caused Du Bois' death.

On the very day the poor fellow died he received a letter from his old mother in France, whom he had not seen for years, who had been appraised of his misfortune, and after reading it he laid back on his cot in the hospital. His eyes closed wearily. He heaved a heavy sigh—he was dead.

THOMPSON VS. LORD.

The Case is Decided in Favor of the Former.

The celebrated road case of Thompson vs. Lord was decided in favor of Road Commissioner Thompson last Monday by Superior Judge Crawford, who declared the road in controversy a public highway and also gives plaintiff judgment for $1150. About a year ago Mr. Lord purchased the Stofen farm at Embarcadero, through which the road in dispute passes and which had been in use as a public highway for thirty-five years. Last October Mr. Lord erected a gate across the road in question opposite his residence, claiming that it was a private road. As the thoroughfare led to the head of navigation on Sonoma creek complaint was made to Road Commissioner Thompson by farmers who have been in the habit of hauling their fruit over the road for years for shipment to San Francisco by schooner, and last February he served a written notice on Mr Lord to remove the gate. Lord refused and Supervisor Thompson removed it. Mr. Lord denied that the gate was an obstruction, and further denied that the road was a public highway. The District Attorney brought suit to have the obstruction removed, to enjoin the defendant from forever obstructing the free use of the highway, and further to recover from Mr. Lord $10 per day for each and every day said gate was maintained from date of notice. The number of days the gate was maintained after notice was one hundred and fifteen. The penalty for obstructing a highway is $10 per day. The $1150 under the law will go to the Sonoma road district. A stay of execution until August 10th was granted defendant. Mr. Lord will carry the case up to the Supreme Court and declares that he will fight to the bitter end for what he conceives to be his rights.

THE BARN-BURNER.

Is He Crazy?—That is the Question Which is Bothering Physicians and Lawyers.

The attorney's and physicians of Santa Rosa, says the Democrat, are in a quandary over the case of Charles Taylor, the man who burned Johannsen's barn, near Sonoma, last week. There seems to be a good foundation on which to base the theory of insanity, and yet the conduct of the man in other respects than that of unprovoked barn-burning, is such as to suggest various questions. It is known that he was chopping wood near Duncan's Mills and that he left days there without apparent cause and with money owing him. He answers questions concerning his father and mother, but he don't give a "whoop" for his brothers and sisters. When asked where they are, he says he supposes they are somewhere in California, but he don't care a "rap." As to the burning of the hay barn, he says that "was his business." He will give no reason for the act. His conduct in the jail suggests a chronic state of melancholia. After eating his meals he retires to his cell and remains seated for hours at a time on his iron cot.

The Fourth July in Sonoma.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated this year by the people of Sonoma Valley at Pioneer Grove, two miles west of Sonoma, one of the loveliest picnic grounds in the State. The celebration will be held under the auspices of the Sonoma Turn Verein. The exercises will be unusually interesting. There will be the usual literary programme to which will be added, foot racing, tug of war, jumping and other athletic games for which prizes will be given. A grand ball at Union Hall will wind up the day's festivities.

LIVING IN A COLD ROOM.

Two Young Men In a Boston School of Learning Have to Move Out.

Two young men who are connected with a well known institute of learning were pleased with their new quarters. But there was one drawback—it was cold as the tomb. They endeavored to remedy the matter with a gentle request. The lady of the house as gently told them she would see to it. They expostulated (after tossing up who should do the expostulating, for they are modest young men), to which the good lady replied that she couldn't understand it. She "had put on all the heat possible. None of the other occupants complained."

They were crushed for the time, but not comforted. A week passed. Finally one member went to the register and called his friend's attention. "See here, G., did you ever experience anything like it? Hold your hands here. Isn't it cold? The blamed thing must be connected with a cold blast apparatus. Heat indeed! We've got to have this fixed or git. I don't wish to freeze to death." G agreed with him.

They resolved themselves into a committee of two. It was a veritable kick this time. The landlady made the same explanation, this time with a little asperity. The upshot was they gave notice to quit. Their week finished the following Friday.

Scene, 10 a. m. Friday (hack ordered round for 10:30).

G.—Here, A., help out with this trunk. We'll leave it out in the hallway. Sooner we get out of this the better!

G. takes hold of the other end, and they move it.

"What's that?" they both exclaim in a breath. And an investigation follows.

It didn't take a great amount of perspicuity to find out that the trunk had been standing on the register; that what they had mistaken for the heater was really a ventilator. Their intentions of bidding an ironical farewell, with sarcastic allusions to the temperature, did not take place. They stole softly away—yes, with a pang of regret, for, oh, the heat emanating from the register was powerful enough to cook a porterhouse steak.—Boston Globe.

Friends of the Farmer.

Probably the most important from an economic point of view among owls is the barn owl. Its food is almost entirely made up of injurious mammals. In the west it feeds largely on pouched gophers, and the stomach contents of many individuals examined have revealed little else than the remains of these rodents. To appreciate properly the services of this owl it must be remembered that pouched gophers are among the most, if not the most, destructive mammals which inhabit this country. In various other localities it feeds extensively on the common rat.

The great horned owl, which in the east is persistent in its attacks on poultry and game, kills immense numbers of rabbits in rabbit infested parts of the west, where its assistance is invaluable to the farmer. It is much addicted to eating skunks, of which it devours great numbers wherever these objectionable animals are common.—Boston Transcript.

Old Scotch Ballads.

The ballad period proper was from 1400 to 1700, although most of the themes which form the nuclei of the tales date far back into the previous centuries. The theme itself always remained the same, but the ballad changed as it passed from mouth to mouth, so that very few versions were ever alike. In the popular ballad period the people knew little of religion, and indeed were almost pagan in feeling. The Christian religion drove out the ballads and replaced them by hymns. The old ballads were a piece of nature, products of instinct, and had a weird force which cultivated poems do not possess. There were about 200 of them in all. They were never read, but rather chanted on winter nights about the fire in the rude cottages, while both men and women sat around and knitted in rapt attention. — Professor Thomas Davidson.

Negro Slaughter Unnecessary.

Mr. Selous told the members of the Manchester Geographical society the other evening that he had never had any armed force with him and usually traveled with a few unarmed followers, from 5 to 10 in number. He had nearly always been in the power of the natives, who might have murdered him with the greatest ease. Yet he never received any ill treatment at their hands, and, with the exception of having to resist a little petty extortion, he had never had any difficulty with them.

This referred to the whole of his 20 years' traveling in South Africa, with the exception of one particular occasion. The occasion referred to was in 1888, when in the dead of night an attack was made on his camp by the Mashukulumbwe, who were incited to the attack by some rebel Barotse. —London News.

A Prosperous Business.

Mrs. Carper—Yes, my daughter was crazy to get married, and she married a man who has failed in everything he has undertaken.

Mrs. Rox (whose husband failed for a million)—Gracious! They must be immensely rich.—New York Press.

Amusing the Children.

Mrs. McShantee (triumphantly)—I see ye are takin in washin again, Mrs. McProudee!

Mrs. McProudee (whose husband has lost a paying job)—Sure it's only to amuse th' childers. They wants th' windies covered wid steam so they can make pictures on them.—New York Weekly.

Invalids and Gambling.

Too many invalids are given to gambling for the purpose of amusement or pastime. Those who visit Florida, Colorado or California on account of climate, who leave home, friends and business on account of their health, who have anxious friends, or probably some relatives, who are hoping for all or some benefit from the change, cannot defeat the object of their trip in any more certain way than by a resort to gaming. No food, stimulant or rest can replace the lost nervous energy expended in this pastime. It tells on the cool and imperturbable as well as on the nervous and easily upset.

We have often seen pulmonary invalids coming west for climatic benefit who slept all morning with closed windows and tightly drawn blinds that, by the exclusion of sounds and light, they might make up during the day for the rest lost during the night—a night often in a close room with burning gas lamps, and, as is generally the case, so small that what fresh air it may contain would hardly suffice for one man. The deadly effects of these conditions, added to the nervous injury incident to gambling, are sufficient to wreck a previously well and hearty constitution. An invalid may be said to about destroy what little chance he may have by following gambling for pastime.—National Popular Review.

Infected Hotels.

A well known physician recently published an account of the experience of a patient at a so called health resort. Here is a part of the story:

"The patient in question was suffering only from overwork; his family history was clear, and there was no tuberculosis to be traced in his immediate kin or among his ancestors. He went to a health resort at a high altitude to recuperate. He boarded at a hotel in which numerous consumptives were coughing and expectorating; four months afterward he developed tuberculosis and now has a typical case of pulmonary phthisis. The unfortunate condition of these resorts is that there is, as a rule, no system of disinfection of the rooms, verandas, hallways, etc.

"The patients are allowed in most hotels to expectorate where they choose, without restriction. The result is that germs are scattered broadcast in the buildings and outside of the grounds. They become dry and are scattered in the air and inhaled by those exposed. Thus a health resort which in its beginning may have been very effective in combatting consumption becomes after a time a veritable center of infection."

A Conflict of Authority.

The late Lord Chief Justice Cockburn was an inveterate enemy to drafts, and on the opening day of the Surrey assize several years ago gave orders that all the windows should be closed. Upon arriving at the court the following morning he was surprised to find that this injunction had been neglected, and upon inquiring was informed that the high sheriff was the culprit. Addressing Mr. Evelyn, the high sheriff, he inquired the reason. "As the high sheriff, your lordship," replied Mr. Evelyn, "I consider it to be my duty to superintend the ventilation of this court, and I have therefore directed that the windows shall not be closed." "As lord chief justice I consider it to be my duty, sir," thundered Cockburn, "to fine you £500 for disobedience." And the money was paid too. —San Francisco Argonaut.

A Narrow Escape In Russia.

We had just left a station near the Irtish river. The road was near the precipitous river bank. Our horses started at a mad pace, and the driver could not control them. They galloped straight toward a precipice that a turn in the road brought just ahead of us. I thought we were lost. M. de Ujfalvy stood on the carriage steps, revolver in hand, ready to shoot the middle horse, hoping that if he fell dead the others would halt. Some Cossacks who saw the danger rushed to us shouting, "Don't fire." One of them grasped the bridle of the middle horse, and by an almost superhuman effort stopped him. It was time. We could look down into the abyss.—Cor. Manchester Times.

My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion, and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would act violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed otherwise her body would cramp and be so for two hours. She took but two bottles of the Nerve Tonic, which cured her entirely of all these torments, which myself and wife gladly testify it truly had the desired effect. D. S. M'GILLIS.
Mrs. Eater Devilbiss, 354 S. Tenth street, San Jose, Cal., writes, October 1889: Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic has indeed done wonders in my part of the country. There has been bought in my neighborhood over $5 worth.
